Eric is considered the godfather of the "theatre of the absurd." He has been involved with erotica and pornography as well as live theatre. With the marketing of the Virtuel Box Company, his vision is to create companies and products that cause controversy. In doing so, Eric has been able to create a "signature" identity for the company, whose products are full of "uncanny coincidences."Q: How do I protect my laptop hard disk from writing over it? I've always loved the security from accessing someone else's laptop or perhaps own laptop hard disk. Whenever someone asks me to show them my laptop or I give to someone to look at, I can always see my laptop screen all clear. However, when I'm not at my laptop, there are chances that the hard disk might erase its data when I remove my laptop from the main desk. My laptop is of the 15" size. Any ideas on how can I protect my laptop hard disk from getting erased every time I use or place it on another desk? A: Take a look at this answer. #!/usr/bin/env bash # Copyright (c) 2019 Kichwa Author # # This program is free software:

Q: Streaming process with the nodejs streams in background I have a stream, a continuous stream of 'a'. I run my program, and my program creates a new process and runs some code that filters on 'a' and then outputs 'a' back into the original stream. The problem I'm facing is that my original stream is not updated with new 'a' data. Any idea why would this not work? Is there something about streams that I'm not understanding? var src = process.create({ output(d) { return d.cursor }, foo: function(d, r) { return d }, bar: function(d, r) { return d + r }, }) var stream = new Stream(src, { transform(d) { return d + Math.random() }, }) setInterval(function() { stream.cursor = stream.next(stream.a) }, 1000) A: I believe the stream.next(a) doesn't return anything because it receives the exact same input as the stream. And Stream is a sequential stream, so the next() method will always receive the same input over and over again until you explicitly call next(somethingOther) or stop(). This should work though: setInterval(function() { stream.cursor = stream.next(Math.random()); }, 1000) However, it's probably not a good idea to modify the stream like this, because it's not clear how it will behave after the first iteration. Q: Changing app.config for .NET Core Application I am having a heck of a time figuring out how to change the settings in my application's app.config file. I've tried the following which didn't work 1 3e33713323
